

GATHERED ABOUT THE CITY.

Further Particulars of the Gilmore Accident.

A BRAKEMAN'S FOREBODING.

The Gilmore Accident.

The last remains of the wreck at Gilmore have been cleared up and trains are now running as usual. The damage cannot, at present, be safely estimated.

The entire blame for the accident seems to rest upon the shoulders of Perry W. Bolton, the engineer of the east-bound freight train, No. 26. His own statement, made at the coroner's inquest, substantially proves that Bolton had ordered the engine to stop at Gilmore, and on the siding in order to allow No. 21, the west-bound freight, to pass him. These orders he received at Papillion. Instead of reading them in the station before he boarded his engine, he waited until he got into the cab before he attempted to decipher the copy. Here he was unable to make out the order perfectly, because the copy was so faded. The west-bound freight train would reach Gilmore about the same time, and he desired to pull in his train ahead of that of the east-bound freight, in order to avoid a collision. He thought that the engine was working very hard, as though all brakes were down, but accounted for this circumstance on the ground that the wheels were slipping on the wet track. The signaling of the conductor he did not hear. Just before the collision he saw a reflection of light from the other engine on the railing of his locomotive but accounted for this by thinking that it came from an engine on the track. When the two engines collided, he and the fireman both jumped, saving themselves.

Bolton makes a frank, straightforward statement of the affair, and attempts to throw the blame on no one else. He admits that he disobeyed the rules of the road, in not fully understanding his orders before he left Papillion. He testifies that he has been in the employ of the Union Pacific for eighteen years off and on, commencing first as a fireman in 1888. He is spoken of as the head of the Union Pacific, and as one of the best and most reliable engineers in the Union Pacific service.

The coroner's jury in giving a verdict on the affair held Bolton for criminal carelessness. He is now in the charge of the sheriff of Sarpy county and will probably be prosecuted for manslaughter. Bolton feels keenly the disgrace of his position and his family at the trial, and is now in a state of nervous prostration. He is now in a state of nervous prostration. SMOKING IN STREET CARS.

A Complaint From a Man Who Has Suffered—A Sugar-Ton.

"One of the great nuisances of the day," said an Omaha man yesterday morning, "is smoking in street cars which is practiced to an alarming extent by men who are supposed to know better. I believe that there is a rule of the street car company which prohibits smoking in street cars, especially when ladies are present, but so far as I have observed, it is ignored with reckless laxity. The drivers ought to be able to enforce it, even if they have to stop the car and insist upon the smoking passenger either throwing away his pipe or getting out. Several times I have ridden on cars where two or three gentlemen (or men) were smoking, and the interior of the car was so thick with smoke that it was almost suffocating. The other day a couple of ladies who were annoyed in the same way were obliged to stop a car and get off. The driver was either too stupid or lacking the courage to put a stop to the nuisance. Another time—this was during fair week—I rode in a car, about half-filled with passengers of which were ladies, and among the passengers were two Germans who were smoking and drinking and out of a flask and in other ways making themselves horribly obnoxious. "Something must be done to abolish this nuisance, which I don't believe is tolerated in any city in the country to the extent that it is here. There are two suggestions that I humbly make. One is that the street car conductors to see that its rules are strictly enforced and the other is that regular smoking cars be put on the line for the benefit of the man who is never happy without a cigar in his mouth."

A Horse Thief Caught.

Among the persons taken to the county jail yesterday was George Marshall, a young man charged with stealing a horse in Holt county in November, 1888. Sheriff Hershizer of that county has been telegraphed of the arrest, and will arrive here to-night to take Marshall in custody.

For nearly two years Marshall has eluded the pursuit of the authorities. Two months ago Constable Edgerton got trace of the fellow, and sent to Holt county for a warrant for his arrest. He lost track of him again until a few days ago, when he located him at Lincoln. There Marshall was arrested yesterday by Constable Kile and brought to Omaha.

Marshall is the son of J. R. Marshall, who was formerly a resident of Omaha. The latter was sent to the penitentiary for a term for having attempted rape upon the person of a young girl.

She Concluded to Wade.

Omaha had the honor of holding within her gates Thursday morning, for a few short moments, a genuine Russian countess. She and her two servants were on a sleeper of the Union Pacific's passenger which, on account of the wreck at Gilmore, did not get in until 10:30. She was on her way from San Francisco to Europe, via New York. She was well educated and spoke English fairly well, evidently being a woman of ability. She was inclined to be fleshy and dressed elegantly with a tendency to extravagance. The wreck put her out considerably, as she was not accustomed to such things. When she found that she would have to walk in the mud, she wanted to know if the porter couldn't telegraph for a carriage for her. She made the best of things, however, and, sustaining her bag of jewels to the porter, safely performed the feat of wading in sticky American soil.

A Farewell Party.

A pleasant social event Thursday night was given by the Omaha chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, at the residence of Judge D. G. Hull, 1701 Capitol avenue, by his thirteen-year-old daughter, Miss Maggie. The party was in honor of Miss Emma and Theda Balch, who with Miss Maggie will leave for St. Mary's school, Notre Dame, Ind. During the evening games and kindred amusements occupied the young folks until a late hour, when all bid a fond farewell to the three young ladies. No little regret was expressed that the duties of school would deprive the circle, even temporarily of their companionship.

Among those present were Misses Susie Colpetzer, House, Curtis, Coburn, Detweiler, Newman, Morse, Parker, Wakely, Doss, Her, Dolan, Yates, Messers, Fonda, Redick, McCormick, Morse, Ruston, Cook, Rogers, Swabe, Polack, Minor, Richardson, and many others.

Koch-Weinmoe.

Cards were received in this city yesterday announcing the marriage of Mr. Allen Koch to Miss Orianna A. Weinmoe, which occurred at Elgin, Ill., Wednesday, September 15. Mr. Koch is well known here as a member of the firm of Fiedt, Maul & Co. The newly-married couple will be at home after October 20, at 2222 Farnam street.

A Wronged Girl.

Ellie Mitchell is a rather prepossessing brunette of eighteen years, who was brought to the Women's Home Thursday, sick and penniless. Her story is the old one of betrayed trust. She came to Omaha about three weeks ago from Lincoln, where she was led astray by a young man whose name she refuses to divulge. Here she procured work in a restaurant as a waiter girl, but yesterday she was obliged to throw up her position on account of poor health. She is being well cared for by the ladies of the home.

Miss Mitchell refuses to talk about her case and evinces no desire to bring her betrayer to justice. She has been for some time in Colorado, but her relatives reside in New York state.

Lecture. On Tuesday evening next, 21st inst., in the First M. E. Church, on Davenport street, Bishop Charles H. Fowler, D.D., L.L.D., will deliver his celebrated lecture, entitled, "Great Deeds of Great Men." Bishop Fowler is one of the ablest men in the Methodist Episcopal church to-day, and an opportunity to hear one of America's greatest pulpit orators should not be missed. Those who have heard him will be glad to do so again and those who have not should not neglect this chance. He it was who delivered the eulogy over President Lincoln which was published throughout the country. The bishop, as a speaker, is none to be less powerful to-day. Tickets should be had at Sax's hat store, open house block.

Local Lectures.

Max Meyer—"The exposition association cleared a neat amount from the recent venture, and we are all happy. Even if we had but come out even we would have been satisfied. We are planning big things for next year, and propose to surpass anything ever attempted in the west."

A Republican Voter—"It goes without saying that the congressional fight this year is to be the hottest ever waged in Nebraska. But on what I can see now, I believe Vice-Weyck holds the winning trump. So far as Church Howe is concerned, I want to say that I will vote for a democrat in preference to him. His corrupt methods have disgusted me, and a democrat would be much more reliable. And I don't believe I am alone in this position, either."

Held for Shooting.

The trial of Jack Taylor and Frank Williams, charged with an assault upon Officer Haze with intent to kill, was heard in Judge Stenberg's court yesterday afternoon. They are the two men who were caught robbing an old man named Keenan on Tenth street last Friday and assaulted the officer who attempted to arrest them. They were defended by P. O. Hawes, District Attorney Estelle appearing for the prosecution. Taylor, the man who did the shooting at Haze, was held to the district court in $1,000 bonds. Williams was sent to jail for thirty days.

The Arion Club.

This popular organization gave the opening party of the season at Germania hall Thursday evening, about fifteen couples being present. It is hardly necessary to say that the affair was thoroughly enjoyed by all. A program of twelve numbers, with supper at the intermission, held the attention of the merry dancers until 1 o'clock. The program consisted of twelve numbers, with supper at the intermission, held the attention of the merry dancers until 1 o'clock. Sporting Notes.

Herb Rothery, the well known sporting man of this city, has done his utmost to make a match between Al Marx, the Texas cowboy, and James McConick, the hacker of Fitzgerald in the recent tilt. All his efforts, however, have failed. John P. Clow, of Denver, has been telegraphed to, and in all probability a match with him can be arranged. But Masterston, his backer, will be here in a few days to arrange preliminaries.

To Clothing Dealers. Remember we duplicate eastern prices on rubber and odd clothing and carry a large stock right here in Omaha.

They are quartered at the Millard in rooms No. 128, 116 and 113, and will remain until today, when they will be given last evening in their honor.

Police Points. Judge Stenberg's business in police court yesterday morning was very unimportant. Ten drunks were arraigned and some of them were discharged. Lily O'Brien, Claude Stark and St. Joseph were let go. The case of John Doe were fined $5 and costs. One vagrant was discharged and two were committed.

To Dry Goods Dealers. You can buy the best quality of ladies' wine colored satin electric and black Gossamers of us at eastern prices. Why not buy in Omaha?

In the Court of Justice.

In Justice Berka's court an affidavit for replevin was issued in the case of L. S. Higgins vs. S. E. Hull, for the recovery of household goods. A marriage license was issued yesterday afternoon to Joseph Woksa and Barbara Calk, both of Omaha.

Rival Sportsmen.

The old Owl club, composed of the old time sportsmen of this city is about to challenge the Omaha Gun club to a hunting contest to take place about the middle of October. The losers are to pay for a grand banquet to be given jointly by the two organizations.

Badly Bruised.

A young man named R. Salain was injured in the Council Bluffs yards yesterday morning by falling from a freight train. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, this city, and cared for by Dr. Galbraith. He was badly injured about the face and head.

To Inventors.

Inventors visiting Lincoln during the state fair can receive any information desired relative to securing letters patent by calling on Hamilton & Trevitt, attorneys and solicitors of patents, rooms 16 and 17, 1117 North Ninth St., Lincoln, Neb.

Lost Treasure.

Dr. George J. Adams, of Massachusetts, claims that while in Louisiana with his regiment during the war three of his soldiers entered a dwelling on the Magnolia plantation, twenty miles above New Orleans, and carried off $50,000 in gold and silver. Being afraid to enter the city with so much money, on reaching a peacemaker near Greenville they selected a tree, at the foot of which they buried the money and then took bearings, one of the party being a civil engineer. Each of the men was furnished with a copy of this and the marauders returned to New Orleans intending to return after the war and recover the money. His two companions were killed and Adams was desperately wounded soon after. Adams was taken to a northern hospital and left paralyzed and helpless. When he recovered the use of his limbs, only a month ago, he returned to New Orleans and at once began to search for his treasure. He found to his dismay that all the older peacemaker trees had been cut down and only the younger ones left, and was consequently unable to recognize the tree under which the treasure was buried. A few days ago he took several other parties in partnership, who advanced a better outfit for surveying land and digging for the money, but as he has unearthed no treasure his partners had him arrested.

COLE YOUNGER AS AN AUTHOR.

Bill Nye Pays Him a Visit.

Bill Nye in Boston Globe: The past few years have seen some wonderful changes in the matter of literature, and men have succeeded as bookmakers who never tried it before, while patient followers who relied upon writing books have been driven to the wall by a torrent of goods secured by the Captain Kidds of America who have robbed the foreign author in our own run the market for the author at home.

I saw not long ago, an author who was very unhappy in bed. Life had been for him one long, piercing wall, he said. He issued a book which sold well. It was not purchased so much by the upper classes, but those who wished to read the struggles of one who had suffered keenly, one who had panted for the unattainable, one whose book had been a failure, who ever the English language was spoken, bought and eagerly perused his book.

And yet he regretted that he had ever issued it. It had been used against him, the authorities and used against him, and though the sales had been fair, he said that if he had his life to live over again he would abstain from literary pursuits.

When I met him he was working in the belting department of the thrashing machine works at Sullwater, a few miles from my estates at Slipperyhorn. He was a man of some years, but he allowed me to call him Cole, because he thought there should be no stiffness or formality between literary people and so he called me "Bill" and I called him "Cole."

The book was a sort of biographical volume, dealing with the gay frolics of the Younger brothers, who were in the general bank clearance business and broken down line for some years. They were also railroading a little under the firm name and style of Younger, James & Younger. They built up a large western trade in the Smith & Wesson and all-around rifle business, which was estimated in an attempt to examine into the condition of the bank at Northfield, Minn., during banking hours. This was resented, and after a long chase on the part of Minn. the Youngers were estimated in an attempt to examine into the condition of the bank at Northfield, Minn., during banking hours. This was resented, and after a long chase on the part of Minn. the Youngers were estimated in an attempt to examine into the condition of the bank at Northfield, Minn., during banking hours.

But after ten years engaged in painting wagons and constructing thrashing machines at a nominal salary, and clothed in those moments of garments so much affected by the guests of our leading penitentiaries, the Younger brothers desire to be pardoned so that they may go into the museum and manslaughter business in Missouri.

At this inauspicious moment, when influential people in Minnesota and Missouri are straining every nerve to secure pardons for these gentlemen, some one suddenly produces a copy of Mr. Younger's great book, in which he has told, through the instrumentality of a third party, who is the ostensible author, how he used to cut up when he was with Quantrell in the disreputable days of the war, and how the Youngers, the Jameses and the Benders used to be up most all night robbing people.

Just as the sweet young lady with the soft heart and still more melting head comes forth on bended knee and asks Governor Hubbard to please pardon Mr. Younger, here comes a low, coarse man with a copy of "Thirty Years in Custody, or How it Feels to be in Prison," being the Biography of and Personal Reminiscences of Coleman Younger & Brothers," in which he tells about standing fifteen prisoners up together in order to see how many he could shoot through with the Winchester rifle, intending to return the rifle to the man from whom he purchased it if it did not prove satisfactory, also how they compelled an old lady to set fire to her house so that the boys could find their way to the melon patch, and then shooting her down because the melons were not ripe after all.

Mr. Younger says that he is very sorry now that he ever dabbled in literature at all. Other authors write what they choose, but he is called strictly to account for everything in his book. Newspapers print little anecdotes from the work and then ask their readers how they found about pardoning the authors. Mr. Younger says everybody knows that, as a matter of fact, many other authors have written books that did not have a particle of truth in them, and that everybody is anxious to believe everything he says in his book. Why is it?

He thinks that the life of a literary man is indeed a hard one. If he desires to tell a story that will be popular, the public will not believe it, and if he desires to impress the reader with the fact that it is a joke, the aforesaid reader believes every word of it. To combine murder and literature properly is a great gift. It requires wonderful shrewdness and versatility. Publishing and petty larceny are different. They have been successfully combined, but authorship and assassination are the easily united. After conversing with

Mr. Younger, I am convinced that the man who cannot obtain a livelihood by assassination alone should not try to piece out his income by dabbling in literature.

For Fall Shooting. It is so dry in the prairie chicken country in New Mexico that hunters carry water out in jugs and pans for the dogs to drink out of.

Thousands of sage cocks and hens inhabit the valley of the north fork of the Snake river in Idaho, where they appear to be quite tame.

The season for water-rail shooting in Maryland has arrived and the marshes along the Potomac river contain thousands of these birds.

Mannel Hernandez killed two fine bucks on the San Gerónimo, sixteen miles west of Santa Fe, N. M. One weighed 166 pounds and had an inch of fat on his back.

It will only be a few years more when prairie chickens and quail will be seen no more in Iowa. Ten years ago boys used to shoot quail on the outskirts of Burlington.

A thoroughly broken actor or pointer will bring from $100 to $500, and he has to be properly cared for throughout the year if he is to be worth anything for autumn sport.
